In need of a helping hand?

Questions about your family?

As a family, you can experience difficult times: frequent challenges with the children, you can't get out of the house, there is illness or there is a lot of tension in the household. It can be a relief if someone takes the time to listen to you, shares their thoughts and experience on parenting and offers you emotional and practical help and tips. A Home-Start volunteer can provide such support. More and more parents receive support from Home-Start. Ask for help too.

Mother Gabriela:

“With three small children, I wanted to do everything perfectly, but I wasn’t getting it right. I learned from volunteer Anne that not everything has to be in order or perfect to have a good family life.”

Father José:

“We are having our first baby and have a lot of questions. The children’s healthcare centre, referred us to Home-Start. The Home-Start volunteer listens to our story. The home visits are very valuable to us. It brings us comfort and makes us more secure as future parents.”
